

Bad Magic is an unholy musical invitation to feel your way through the darkness and get you dancing with your shadow. Drawing inspiration from the same ancient and primal forces that drive rock n roll, r&b, heavy metal and the blues - the Vancouver, BC based 4-piece have found a unique and powerful sonic vibration to tap into. They wear their tricks on their sleeve and aim to please based on the simple fact there is magic in the moment and it's up to all of us to capture it. With an arsenal of thoughtfully crafted, high energy songs and thought-provoking lyrical content there is something for everyone to move to and be moved by. The rhythmic undertones of thick, muddy grooves are possessed by a pounding and dynamic drummer, allowing the vocals to traverse between the carnal and the ethereal with a commanding authority. Soaring lead guitars bring context to manic rhythmic climaxes orchestrated by an enigmatic front man with some demons to work through.

Bad Magic formed at the tail end of 2018 when Eric Novak was faced with the ultimatum to keep working on a career as an engineer or dive face first into the music he'd been developing for a decade. A fateful encounter at a jam night hosted by a mutual friend brought drummer, and Toronto native, Marco Cortese into the picture and after a single jam and a couple good left-handed conversations they both decided to move to Vancouver and start focusing on music full time together. Novak enlisted the help of long-time friend, local legend and bassist Clark Buchanan (aka Sergeant Funk) to colour the rhythm section and guitar virtuoso, Dylan Lammie (The Golden Lamm) to round out the sound and thus the potent elixir was complete.

The band has completed recording on their debut EP and have independently released their first single Miss Ramona to great success. The album is set to be released early 2020 along with an extensive touring schedule to promote the release.
